

2007 Ambitions

Having received such encouraging support from many quarters throughout 2006, Michael's profile is raised to a new level. He is focused, determined and eagerly awaits the start of the 2007 season which will see him launch his most serious attempt for success to date. Racing once again in the British 125cc Championship (which runs alongside the British Superbike Championship at prominent circuits throughout the UK and Ireland) Michael also hopes to contest several rounds of the highly competitive European and Spanish 125cc Championships if time and financial resources will allow.

He is also hopeful that his current profile within the British Championship paddock will allow him to expand the team and if enough funding can be raised he would like to run an additional rider in either the 125cc or Supersport Championship in 2007 with a view to one day running a successful team within World Championship level competition.

Off track, he plans to continue to develop his PR / TV career and will once again commentate at the European rounds of the World Superbike Championship for superbike-news.com in addition to continuing to play a pivotal role in the annual 'Day of Champions' at the British round of the Moto GP series as well as at the season's finale in Valencia.

"With luck on my side, the full support of my sponsors, top level machinery and mechanical back-up, I am confident that I can build upon my regular point scoring rides from 2006 and be a regular top ten finisher in the British 125cc Championship"

MICHAEL NEEDS YOU!

Michael is constantly looking for sponsors to join the most unique team to ever enter the motorcycle road racing arena...

Record spectator attendance this year and an increase in TV and media attention strongly focus the spotlight on motorcycle road racing as a rapidly growing sport.

With a typical season costing in excess of £35,000 the riders and teams taking part would not be able to maintain their competitiveness without comprehensive sponsorship.

With constant machine development required, an average of three sets of tyres per event, fuel, oils and other machine consumables like chains and spark plugs not to mention the cost of entry fees and simply travelling to the events it's easy to see why MICHAEL NEEDS YOU!

In return for your support your company name or logo will feature on Michael's race machine, his leathers, team clothing and within the team's hospitality area all of which appear on TV and in photo opportunities in national magazines and newspapers.

The race paddock is the perfect platform for the companies supporting Michael to be acknowledged and their involvement promoted. As a sponsor you will be invited to watch Michael perform on the track and be given an exclusive hospitality area to accommodate you and your guests.

Michael also has an impressive website with dedicated sponsor links as well as information on his career to date. It also features a photo gallery and regular updates on race results and events.
